NEW HUMANITIES AND SOCIAL SCIENCES LIBRARY

With the opening of the new Rutherford building, the Humanities and Social Sciences now have a library of their own.

The Humanities and Social Sciences Library will be an integrated system to provide the full range of library services to users in its assigned areas of responsibility. These will include, but not be restricted to, all services provided by the following former library departments: Humanities and Social Sciences Reference, Undergraduate Library, Special Collections, Selections, and the Humanities and Social Sciences Periodicals Reading Room. These departments have all been amalgamated into the new Library.

Co-ordinated by MOHAN SHARMA, it will be organized on a functional, rather than departmental, basis. To fill the gap left by the retirement of LILIAN LEVEREDGE, Head of Selections, the Library will marshal, and apply to the development of the collections, the combined professional and subject knowledge of the 21 members of the academic staff assigned to the Humanities and Social Sciences Library, and will extend these collection development services to all teaching departments in its area of responsibility.

These same staff members will also provide reference services in the various areas of the Library. The Library also will be searching for a senior staff member to co-ordinate the reference activities of the Humanities and Social Sciences Library. It is hoped that the new organization will result in a much better liaison with users, and the Library expects to be much more active in its relations with teaching departments.

The Humanities and Social Sciences Library will take shape over the summer, and should be completely organized by next fall. Unfortunately, the freeze on the University's building program and the consequent postponement of Phase II of the new Rutherford building have resulted in a less than ideal physical arrangement. Because of space limitations in the Rutherford complex, the Humanities and Social Sciences Library will be forced to continue to provide some of its services from Cameron Library. The following list shows the services to be provided, the locations, and the approximate dates they will start:

Book Collection

The book stock will be located in new Rutherford, as follows: Floor 1, Classification A, B, Q-Z; Floor 3, Classification C-F; Floor 4, Classification G-N; Floor 5, Classification P. Circulation services will be provided on the second (Main) floor, near the entrance.

Reference Services

These services will be provided on the second (Main) floor of new Rutherford, starting July 3. They will include a union catalogue of library holdings but, because of unavoidable delays, this will not be available until approximately September 1.

Collection Development

Project services for collection development will be located on the third floor of new Rutherford, and will be available approximately August 1.

Periodical Services

A reading room for current periodicals will be located on the main floor of old Rutherford and will open approximately September 1.

Special Collections

This service will remain in its present location in Cameron, but will receive more space.

Government Publications

These have been moved to the third floor of Cameron and are available now, although some alterations will take place over the summer.

Micromaterials

This service will remain in its present location in Cameron.

Interlibrary Loans

The technical aspects of this service will be located in the basement of Cameron and will be available there approximately October 15. However, prospective borrowers in the area of the humanities and social sciences should apply to the Reference desk in new Rutherford.

Undergraduate Library Services

These services will be located on the second floor of Cameron, and will be available approximately September 15. The Reserve Reading Room will be located on the main floor of Cameron and will open approximately September 1.

Study Space

Although there will be seating for users in all areas of the Library, a special unsupervised study area will be located on the second floor of old Rutherford, and will open approximately September 15. Aside from the Periodicals Reading Room on the main floor, the remainder of old Rutherford will be occupied by the School of Library Science, the Extension Library, and University Archives.

Further announcements and statements with respect to the new Humanities and Social Sciences Library will be made during the course of the summer.
